Art Unit: 1754

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 2, 7-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Wendt et al. 6146782.

The reference teaches, especially in columns 4-6, nanosized alloy catalysts, of Pt and Ru at 50-50 on a support. The reference does not explicitly teach the claimed form, but no differences are seen, especially given the teaching of alloy catalysts and the similarity to the synthesis disclosed (solutions of metal salts). Claim 10 is not a proper process claim and thus the proposed hypothetical steps do not distinguish the product.

Claims 1-15 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Laine et al. 6551960.

The reference teaches in columns 2-4 and 8 equimolar Pt and Ru on a support, with nanosized metal clusters, and a similar synthesis using ethylene glycol and heating. While the catalyst is not identically described, no differences are seen due to the similarity of the methods. The overlapping size of column 8 renders the claims unpatentable. Concerning claim 5, 66% or so is exemplified, which is not considered patentably distinct versus the claimed 70%. Concerning claim 4, note claim 28 of the patent which includes 90% Pt.

The examiner takes Official notice that the species not explicitly recited by the references are old and known as functional equivalents to those that are taught, and thus no species are patentable. In claim 10, FCs should be changed to 'fuel cells'. The section at the end of the specification should be deleted and incorporated into the background, and the cited references provided in an IDS.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Any inquiry concerning this communication should be directed to examiner Hendrickson at telephone number (571) 272-1351.
